

Millions of Americans have learned the sad truth.

That they were injured or their loved ones were killed because of defective products that were known to be dangerous for years.

Despite that, confidential settlements kept the public from knowing about these incredibly hazardous products.

Confidential settlements have resulted in the death and injury to thousands of people.

But by opening most settlements to daylight, corporations tempted to cut corners and risk injuries will have a motivation to prevent harm.

The law firm of Brenna and Brenna urges you to tell your legislators to do what's right.
