

DRIVERS SPOT 60 SECONDS

Maybe this would be a good time to think about the people we meet everyday. People we interact with at work or on the street.

Think of how often we go out of our way to give them a place in line or how we will hold the door for a stranger.

Maybe this would be a good time to remember that they are the very same people driving cars merging into our lanes or trying to get a break in heavy traffic.

Don't forget that we often refuse to extend those same simple courtesies to another driver, merely because we have no personal interaction with them.

We can't speak to them or look them in the eye.

This is Bob Brenna, Jr. from the law firm of Brenna & Brenna asking you to treat your fellow men and woman, people tired after a long day at work or frustrated when their toddlers are crying relentlessly in the back seat the same way you would if you encountered them in the line at Wegmans.

Give them respect and courtesy, give them a break, give them a reason to be thankful and to treat someone else just a little bit better as well; it's contagious.
