

JOHN ADAMS 30 SECONDS

Long before he was our country's second president, attorney John Adams led the sons of liberty preparing for the incredible task of revolution and freedom.

Still he was asked to defend British Captain Preston in his Boston Massacre murder trial. No crown attorney would take the unpopular cause.

Despite knowing he would be hated, Adams said, "if no one would represent this man, then by God I will."

What attorneys must do won't always be popular but it should always be what's right.
